SPECIAL THANKS TO

COLOPHON

The Toike Oike is produced using three bitchin' PCs and a Mac. Often, they will engage in pretentious arguments over who has better features and is easier to use. When the dust settles, the result is a veritable "Odd Couple" of cross-compatibility. Sometimes, it looks retarded.

WHAT HO?

The Toike Oike is a covert organization committed to the proliferation of humour at the University of Toronto. It is our mandate to insist that your education is NOT about your career so much as it is about shaping your outlook on life to come. So lighten up, sit back and have an iced tea (make sure it's green tea- antioxidants are good for you). Our ranks are filled with zealous revolutionaries from both Engineering and Arts & Science. We meet every month following distribution. Viva la Nintendo revolution!

DISCLAIMER

The radical, ultra right-wing opinions expressed in this newspaper reflect those of the Engineering Society and the University of Toronto. In fact, they even reflect the opinions of the writers. NOT! If you happen to find any of the material within these pages offensive, do not try to sue us, as we have a crack team of racially diverse lawyers ready to bring the pain and give out mix tapes. Sucka MC's ain't shit.

EDITORIAL

Hello all

Since it is Frosh week, I feel I should say something to that affect. So get ready for Vesna's 1-year's worth of wisdom:

I am still technically a frosh while writing this. I don't know much, so you should probably stop listening. Actually, you should definitely stop listening, because this is the printed word, and it doesn't sound like anything. Silly frosh.

However, you should also stop reading, for a few reasons. First off, your mind is like a harddrive. Actually frosh, YOUR mind is like a floppy-drive. Once you absorb roughly 1.44 MB of data you start over-writing stuff. That's why you guys can do calculus, but can't tie your shoes.

Secondly, reading is what you do in school. Hey chowderhead, school's out for summer! School's out for-evah! Schooooooool's blown to pieces.... Oh wait, school keeps coming back year after year? Well fuck me sideways. Anyways, reading is bad because it presumes that you don't already know everything - and that is a bad attitude to have. Attitudes are like assholes, the more the merrier. Or something like that.

Thirdly your classes start soon, and so do your first tests! Hurry and study frosh! Ok, I kid, I kid. You will have a test tomorrow, but studying won't help. I suggest putting a damp cloth over your head and crying in a corner. Not that, uh, I've ever done that, but, uh, a friend of a friend did. In Waterloo.

Fifthly, learn to count. We are only on option four. But enough with my ranting. Here are some actual pearls of wisdom from my vast, vast 1 year's worth of experience.

You will cry. It doesn't matter what age, gender, or level of manliness you think you are, tears will flow. Angry, angry tears. There will be pounding fists against a desk. Well... that last one is ambiguous, but whatever. Oh, and quiet tears into your pillow hoping that your parents/room-mates don't hear you and call you on it.

APS 111/112 sucks. Unless your in EngSci, but then you guys are sent from the future to kill Sarah and John Connor so going to class is moot. For the rest of us normal-ish ones, the class will suck. Pay attention, you will have an exam in the first one. Oh, and don't pick the chameleon. Chameleons are useless.

You will desire coveralls. But no dice. Wait until next summer. It will be sweet.

Math will hurt. In more ways than one. Why it will do this... I'll let you learn on your own. There are some things that only two months of MAT186 will teach you.

There will be random shit. Whether it is someone dropping trou in the Atrium or grown men crying, be prepared for random crap going on in the basement.

Umm... that's all I can think of at this moment. Don't worry though, more wonders and amazing unforgettable experiences await you. Whether it's the exquisite joy of the calculus test you forgot about, or the ecstasy of CIV101 problem sets, there will moments that will never leave your mind.

So there you have it, Froshies. You will go insane and question your career choice, but you will have a grand ol' time doing it. Also, join the Toike. That's what I did, and I'm still relatively sane.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Are you still that ass-clown who used to fly planes without engines last year?
But seriously, who TF are you, MF?

ROFL-ing myself to sleep,

Aaron

Dear Aaron,

No, I am NOT that ass-clown from last year. I am a new ass-clown, although I prefer anal entertainer. Oh wait... that's not any better. Just call me Vesna. And go look on my Facebook, you lazy sons-of-bitches. Like I'm actually doing any work on the Toike this year. HA!

Vesna

Dear Editor,

I am now the richest man in the world. What do you think of that?

Carlos Slim Helu

Dear Senor Carlos,

I think that your attractiveness has increased exponentially. Did I tell you that I am a virtuous, 18-year old white female with no sexual diseases, and come from a fertile family? I will bear you many sons. All I ask in return is your love. And jewels. You handsome, handsome man. Call me.

Vesna

Dear Editor

I am going to grad school in Saskatoon. Can you tell me why?

John McLeod

PS: I don't know

Dear John,

Baby, why you leavin'? I thought all that love I gave you, not to mention two children, were enough to keep you here. Did you think that you could just pick up and go? Do you know how embarrassing it was to be the only pregnant 18 year old here? Or to know I caught your chlamydia? WTF John? I gave you my love and you ditch me? No, screw this, I'M leaving YOU.

Have fun in Saskatoon, baby. I'll miss you. Write me.

NEWS BRIEFS

Washington [Toike]: Attorney General and local minority Alberto Gonzales resigned today in a flurry of bureaucratic mish-mash. A long standing figure of controversy in the Bush administration, Alberto Gonzales was criticised for being inept, overly political, and a douchebag. When asked to explain his resignation, Mr. Gonzales said "I do not recall the exact circumstances of my resignation, although I was present at the meeting in which the issue was discussed, and presided over said meeting in a manner fitting of my office." President Bush supported his friend, saying "We have reached a turning point in Iraq, and we are fighting a War on Terror. I am the decider, and that is a pre 9-11 mindset. I look forward to answering any questions the House or Senate may have on the matter. People serve at the pleasure of the president. What was the question again?" Vice President Dick Cheney made no comment, before shooting a reporter in the face.

New Westminster [Toike]: More delays loom for the Robert Pickton trial. Pickton, accused of 26 counts of murder and owning a pig farm, has been on trial for approximately one billion years while the judge chews the fat of the complicated legal arguments raised by the defence. "Mr. Pickton is a swine" said Crown Attorney Ace "Babe" Napoleon "who roots around in the filth of depravity." Not all believe in Pickton's guilt, however. "I don't want to seem like I'm hogging the limelight," said defence counsel Freddy Rooter, "but Robert's good name has been rolled in the mud by greedy reporters waiting for their turn at the trough." Many however, just want the trial to end. "We are sty-mied by these constant delays." Said a local resident. "The ham-handed tactics of the defence leave Pickton in the pink of health while the jury chews the fat."

Toronto [Toike]: The trusty hackers have done it again, and the latest offering from Apple, the iPhone, has been hacked. "We are committed to freeing hardware from the constraints of proprietary software" said hacker representative Aaron Maihedd. "That is why as soon as the iPhone was released, we knew we had to figure out a way of hacking it." The first attempts apparently resulted in failure, reported hacker Seymour Ram. "We tried using toothpicks, safety pins, and even Xacto knives. All of these barely scratched the surface. Finally we pulled out the big guns: the tomahawk." As a result, the iPhone has successfully been hacked, and reduced to a paperweight.

Open Letter of Complaint to My New Roommate, Who Happens to be a Ghost

Hey man,

I hope you're getting settled in alright and like it here in your new dorm. I know that college can be a big adjustment and sometimes it causes people to act a little strange. Over the last week or so I have noticed some behaviour that could be detrimental to us having a good year together as roomies.

First, I've noticed that you have been tossing books around our room and ruffling papers everywhere. Now this in itself isn't really a problem. It's a cool trick that you do and I am a bit of a fan of the Poltergeist impression, but please, can you clean up the mess afterwards? I don't want to bring chicks to my room (hopefully) when it looks like a certain ghost threw a hissy-fit in here. Just try to keep it clean is all I'm saying.

Second, when I'm in here with my old girlfriend from high school who I am totally going to break up with before classes start, can you please not hang out "just to watch and maybe get in a quick spook"? We all think the whole walking through walls thing is awesome, but it's hard for me to keep the mood going when you're constantly hovering three feet above the bed, pulling back the sheets whispering "What you are doing makes Jesus cry." As fun as it is having you support me trying to get some, girls don't really like the idea of another person watching, let alone a ghost.

Finally, when we're in the common room watching TV, it would be really nice if you could be a little less critical about the movies I want to watch. If I want to throw in the special edition of Casper, I don't need you pointing out all the inaccuracies. I don't care if dying isn't really like being born, but backwards. Don't tell me. It ruins the magic. Just because you can't grasp the idea of a ghost who would rather love than scare, doesn't mean that I can't too.

Honestly, these are really just some minor things that have been bugging me over the last week. I don't want to sound like a total buzz-kill here. I just think that it is important for us to respect each other's boundaries. Aside from those concerns, I think we are going to have a really sweet year together. If you have any questions, or like, want me to pick something up for you (I noticed you were having some trouble with your backpack yesterday) just let me know.

Peace out man,

Harv

P.S. I was thinking that we should throw the raddest Halloween party ever!!! Maybe even with a haunted house theme?! Let me know what you think!

Science Demands Equal Representation in Religious Ceremonies

In an unexpected response to recent debates on the validity of Intelligent Design and other faith-based education initiatives, Science yesterday demanded equal representation in Christian religious ceremonies.

"We're only looking for equal rights", insists leading scientist Dr Complicated, "The chance to give the church-goer both sides of the story and then they can choose for themselves." Controversial additions to the mass ceremony include:

"The Lord God knows all and sees all..."

- The wine turns to the blood of the Saviour by the miracle of transubstantiation, or possibly due to the addition of iron, T-cells, and the capacity to carry oxygen molecules bonded to hemoglobin.

- The Lord God knows all and sees all; however, he can only know the position and momentum of an electron down to the Planck limit.

- Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. Apply forces to objects as you would have them apply an exactly equal yet opposite force to you.

- Ceremonies will now include readings from the books of Matthew, Mark, Halliday and Resnick.

- God created the world in seven days; however, because he was traveling very close to the speed of light at the time it seems to a rest frame observer that it took much longer, and involved dinosaurs.

Many are critical of the proposed changes. "One of the guiding principles of science is to question the world around you, to observe and to think for yourself," states one distraught churchgoer, "That kind of attitude has no place in religion."

Jewniversity - The Jewy Side of Skule

Are you young, Jewish and in your first year?

I'm sure not. But if you are, I'm here to help. I know that life can be tough, especially when you're a Jew, and especially when you're in your first year. So here's all you need to know to survive. (If you're not one of the Chosen People, stop reading right now and go to the Christian section of the Toike on page 3.)

Don't be afraid

The first time I stepped on campus, my first thought was "There certainly are a shitload of crosses on campus. I wonder if they're going to convert me." There are crosses everywhere – UC, St. Mike's, Knox College, hell, Gerstein itself is a giant cross. They were even going to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel onto Con Hall, but ran out of money.

But not to worry, your faith is secure. Back when the university was built, Christianity was the big thing and forcibly converting Jews was all the rage. Now, however, the university is all about multiculturalism and only carries out forced conversions discreetly. You're pretty free to go wherever you want and not have to worry about suddenly being pushed into a swimming pool or puddle and told you're a Catholic."

Find your brethren

You're going to want to find the other Jews on campus so that you have a group of people that you can relate to and spend time with. This is actually pretty easy, as I found out.

To find the Jewish girls, just strike up a casual conversation and ask the right questions. Did her mother pamper her? Act as her matchmaker? When did she get her first credit card? Her first car? How many kids does she want to have? (Try and bring that one up tactfully.)

Any real Jewish girl would have a credit card at twelve, a car at sixteen and a man her mother wants her to marry at twenty. And she'll want to have at least three kids.

Finding the Jewish guys is even easier – just go for a swim at Hart House! Afterwards in the shower you can do a visual to narrow the field of potential Jews.

Now then, you can't just go staring at other guys' packages in the shower

(this isn't the AC after all), so try and be discreet. Drop the soap, steal a quick glance or use my preferred technique – wear sunglasses. Since not all circumcised guys are Jewish (those wannabes), you need to find out when they were circumcised. After you get out and are in the changing room, start talking to them. Try something along the lines of "Boy, that water sure was nice today, especially on my circumcised member. I noticed that you too have no foreskin, when did you get that removed?"

If they don't punch you right in the face, then they're Jewish. I lost several teeth myself, but like any real Jew, I know several good dentists.

Have fun

There are plenty of activities to do with your fellow Jews, anything from avoiding the U of T Varsity Christian Fellowship to avoiding the U of T Chinese Christian Fellowship to avoiding the U of T Korean Christian Fellowship to even avoiding the U of T International Christian Fellowship.

Other than those, we meet once a month to secretly control the university.

Stay tuned next month for: Keeping it Real Kosh

As you may have noticed, we here at the Toike enjoy putting hardhats on attractive men and women. This makes us feel better.

Our resident sexpert, Aaron, offers his fatherly sage - like advice to the younger generation. He has years of experience of making 'Guides for Engineers', despite not being an Engineer nor literate.

Intro

Your first few weeks at U of T can definitely be intimidating. There are a lot of new things going on all at once: moving away from home for the first time, being at a new school with people who don't know you (or your unfortunate high school nickname [w00t!]), and suddenly being thrown into a situation where you have to share a room with a total stranger. And now, suddenly you have to coordinate your class schedules with your roommate so that you can optimize your whack-off schedules so as to avoid any awkwardness. Couple that with the ever increasing challenge of trying to get your D wet (sex!!), and shit just got a whole lot harder.

Well fear not. The Toike has compiled all of its sexpertise into this sure-fire guide to getting some sweet lovin'. These pages will get you laid.

Meeting Chicks

Meeting women is somewhat of a challenge if you're an engineer. There are two intrinsic problems to picking up chicks if you are a male engineer seeking female companionship: 1) you are likely awkward around girls/scared of them and 2) there are practically no women in engineering.

What that means is if you want to crush cheeks, you're going to need to venture out to other parts of campus and meet some other girls. The Faculty of Arts and Science has a tonne of girls, they're pretty easy too, so that is a good start.

Breaking the ice is one of the hardest things to do. Just ask the Titanic. That is why it is important to have a small repertoire of witty and seemingly off the cuff phrases to share with the object of your desire. Common examples of some effective conversation-starters

The chances of you both smiling at the same time and about the same thing is slim to none.

include, "So, as of last week I'm a level 65 Paladin," and, "One time, I stepped on my own penis in the shower." The ice-breaker is your chance to be creative and woo some babes. Think of something that a girl would love to hear, say it, and then get ready to catch the bra that she is sure to throw at you. Finally, when it comes to meeting women, it's pretty much a numbers game. Not every girl is going to want to talk to you.

That's fine. You just need to keep at it. If you talk to 99 girls you are going to find that one that wants to fuck a champion Paladin.

Looking Your Best

Most girls will tell you that looks aren't that important and that they would rather be with a guy with a sense of humour and a good personality. However, that's just something they say to be nice to ugly people. The truth is if you really want to get some below the equator action, you will need to make a few minor and superficial changes.

A lot of this really just comes down to hygiene. Apparently, chicks dig a guy who has recently showered.

The F!rosh Guide to Sex

With the right combination of baby powder and cologne, it's easy to fake this "just-showered" look. Throw in a decent pack of breath-freshening gum, and you'll give the illusion that you're a man with running water.

Shaving also gets the attention of the fairer sex. Whether it's a face with the Mach 3 as short as they can go without drawing blood, the elimination of body hair is a sure-fire way to impress the ladies. There are a few ways to achieve this effect, and it mostly depends on your preferences and level of commitment to the cause. Primitive razors are okay if you are old school, but real men de-pube with chemicals. Nair offers a line of hair removal products exclusively for men. As long as you ignore the repeated warnings against using it on your junk, you are good to go.

Get used to me

Finally, a lot is said about a man from the clothes that he wears. That being said, don't wear a shirt you got for free from your high school Calculus Olympics. It makes you look retarded. Try buying a shirt from a store and wearing it. Women love guys who buy their clothes from clothing stores. Doing so is a big step towards having sex with a woman.

Safe Sex

When you finally get to that Holy Grail of getting a girl back to your room, it is important to not get too caught up in the moment and take certain precautions to ensure that the sex you engage in is safe.

First off, make sure that you are doing it on a solid surface. There's nothing more embarrassing than going deep on a rickety bed frame and have it collapse in the middle of the main event. Bruised vertebrae are definite mood killers. If you are unsure about the sturdiness of your bed/ploughing surface, be sure to test it before game time. Take a few test humps on it when no one is around. That will give you sufficient time to reinforce the bed with old text books or your roommate's CD collection. It will be the most useful thing that Creed has ever done. (editor's note: are people really still making Creed jokes?)

Creed: Always ready for a quick and easy insult

The next thing you "need" to worry about is AIDS. Now, the libera! media will have you believe that AIDS is a real concern that needs to be considered when engaging in casual F!rosh sex.

The truth is, AIDS is no big deal what with all the medicine we have now. And seriously, do you live in Africa?

No! So unwrap it and jump right in.

"But Mr. Sexpert, what about pregnancy? Shouldn't I wear a condom to prevent pregnancy?"

Young newb, pregnancy is nothing to fear. If you haven't checked out a biology textbook lately, the girl is the one who gets pregnant.

Besides, using a condom makes you a pussy. If you are one of those cursed with compassion and don't want to get a girl pregnant because you care what happens to her, there is one sure-fire method of keeping your boys from going behind enemy lines. Pull out.

Conclusion

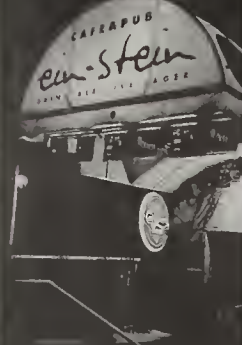

We hope this guide will help you on your journey to D-wetting. The important thing to remember is to have fun. And don't worry, if you can't find a girl with whom to get horizontal, remember that the institution of the University of Toronto is readily available to fuck you whenever it has a chance.

DNA Test Proves Pope, Eggs Benedict Not Related New Egg-Based Religion Gaining Support

In a new study released Tuesday, His Holiness Pope Benedict XVI was discovered to have no relation to the popular brunch food, eggs benedict. The new study puts to rest the idea that the pope's name was divinely inspired by what has widely been considered Christianity's holiest breakfast.

The study was ordered after tensions increased between the Catholic Dairy Farmers Association (CDFA) and the Egg Farmers of Christ (EFC).

An argument broke out between the groups when the EFC announced that the egg was clearly God's preferred source of energy following the election of the pope. The CDFA promptly followed up by pointing to the food chart. They bragged about having an entire food group dedicated to dairy by God, and claimed that eggs are only an afterthought under 'Meat and Alternatives.' The argument turned ugly when several cows were found tipped and drowned in egg yolks the following day.

With the increasing violence from normally peaceful Christian groups, some even started to question God. Catholic priests were reported to have started off many sermons by asking the question, "Which came first: the pope or the egg?" To ease tensions, Pope Benedict XVI decided to donate a lock of hair to be studied.

Not everyone was violent after the new pope came into power, though. In July 2005, just two months after Pope Benedict XVI was elected, a new sect of Christianity started to appear around the world. Some Christians from every country united and declared the egg as a holy symbol. In October 2005, a meeting in Paris, France by the leaders of this new sect determined the new name for the group. After considering names such as Catholegg, Proteggstant, and Eggligan, the group decided to go with the name 'Egghovah's Witnesseggs.' The group is gaining in popularity fast. With their slogan, "Delicious, Nutritious, Religious," hundreds of new followers are converting every day. The Egghovah's Witnesseggs' spiritual leader, Gary 'Big Yolk' Carlyle, boasted that there is a lot to like about the new sect of Christianity. He said, "Ever since the Atkins' Diet went out of style, people have been looking for new ways to drop the pounds. Some people look to God, and others look to eating healthy. If you want to look to both, look to

His Holiness waves to his egg-stroordinary followers.

Egghovah's Witnesseggs. "We give people eggs-actly what they want," says Carlyle. "People have been going eggs-tatic since joining and they've been eggs-periencing eggs-traordinary results. They find that they are less stressed, have been getting along better with family members, and have more energy to eggs-ercise. It's really very eggs-iting." When asked if the study regarding the relationship between Pope Benedict and eggs benedict would affect their movement, Carlyle responded, "We can't let all scientific studies determine our path in life. So far Christianity has only focused on The Holy Trinity. We're looking to eggs-pand people's faith by teaching them about the fourth eggs-istence of God on Earth: eggs."

After only two years in the public eye, Carlyle has skyrocketed to top the list of People Magazine's "Top 50 Insane Religious Advocates." Not to be outdone, Tom Cruise was spotted hanging naked from a palm tree in Hollywood throwing antidepressants at those passing by. This is said to be his personal celebration for the successful completion of Scientology's Operating Thetan VIII level.

Virgin Sex Columnist

Dear VSC: I am a brand new F!rsh hoping to lose my virginity as soon as possible so I do not become one of those sad, lonely engineers still a virgin at the age of 26. How can I make this possible?

-Dilbert

Dear Dilbert,

Despite your amusing nome (I love Dilbert!) real women do not respond well to the actual Dilbert type. I suggest dropping out and becoming a Lotin Languages major with a minor in Romantic Poetry. The trick to women is a sexy European accent. It doesn't matter that you are not from Europe. Just make your name a sexy, Euro version of itself, and wear open-necked button-down shirts. Pretend to have a villo on Loke Como in Italy, and fake a knowledge of fine wines. Become an heir to a wealthy Greek shipping mogtate. Wear Speedos. Become the perfect gentleman. That will land you a woman of only sexual looseness that you please.

Of course, if o!l else foils, you can just hook up with a drunk chick at a party. It's not unethical if you're drunk too.

Toike Guest Celebrity Blog

Each month, the Toike invites a celebrity to share some snippets from his or her blog.

This month's celebrity guest blogger is Seth Rogen from Knocked Up and Superbad.

What's up blog nerds? Hey check it out: "I live in your computer!!" Ha ha, get it? God, I'm fucking famous. So any-ways, what a summer it has been. Two top movies in one season.

Take that, Sandler, you one-hit per summer gay firefighter.

I don't really know what to blog about here. I didn't even know that 'blog' was a verb until I was asked to blog something. But I guess you can pretty much verb anything these days. I Googled it and, it said that you can.

I'm still kinda drawing a blank here of what to talk about. Did I ever mention I was Jewish? Because I am. I'm Jewish, everyone. I like pot too. I love it. Man, if I was high right now, I would be so high!

So I guess I can fill in the rest of this blog with my own personal musings about life. I'll be like a Linwood Barklay (look him up, he's like Dave Barry, but Canadian). I'm pretty new to this whole Internet thing. I don't know exactly how popular it is. I just heard about it a couple years ago. My friend told me it was this thing that's like some International database for porn. This thing is fucking sweet. Name a race of people, a sex act, the number of participants, and there's a video of it.

Yesterday I found a 45 minute movie of a Peruvian woman giving services to twelve midgets at the same time. I didn't even know that shit was possible. I showed my buddy the movie and he didn't even flinch. (He's had the interweb for like 3 years now) After the eighth time watching the movie and my fourth bowl from my bong I got another idea for a movie which is totally going to be sweet:

I play this fat comedy writer dude who loves weed and discovers Internet porn for the first time. I get so into it that I end up going a little crazy and isolating myself from my friends. I end up watching so much Internet porn that I declare myself the "Porn King" but then get hospitalized for related injuries. I think I'm gonna call it "Chaffed Up."

Well that's all the time I have for my blog. I have a few videos that need watching. Oh, and a little advice for any budding filmwriters/actors out there: never underestimate the power of a dick joke.

Peace out fuckwads,

Seth
